SIR DAVID WILKIE, R.A.

32 THE LETTER WRITER: A SCENE IN CONSTANTINOPLE, where a scribe with long beard, spectacles, and a high cap, seated cross-legged, holds a letter in his hand; two young women, one with a white yashmak (face veil), the other in a rakish red and white Turkish cap, listen attentively

"Walked through the suburb below Pera, Tophanna. Saw at the outer court of a mosque a scribe of most venerable appearance. He was reading a letter or paper he had been writing for two Turkish young women—one very handsome: the way they were placed made an excellent composition for a picture."

Sir D. Wilkie's Journal, October, 6, 1840

"Wilkie's fine, though unfinished, picture of this interesting little group was bought at the Wilkie sale by Lord Charles Townshend, for 425 guineas. As a piece of colour it is as rich as Rembrandt or Correggio."—Allan Cunningham's 'Life of Sir D. Wilkie,' vol. iii. p. 320.

Panel—oval top

26 in. by 21 in.

Signed "David Wilkie, Constantinople, 1840"

From the McConnel Collection, 1867

W. ETTY, R.A.

36 THE RETURN OF THE PRODIGAL SON. The son falls, naked and weeping, into the arms of his father—an old man with long white beard; near the entrance to the house, to the extreme right, a man is about to kill the “fatted calf,” whilst beyond him, in the porch, women are already dancing; to the left of the picture, the elder brother gives orders to a labourer

“The Morning Post was by no means sure the ‘Prodigal’s Return’ was not ‘the best imaginative picture in the Exhibition.’—Not impossibly. —For it is one of those chosen samples of Etty’s art, wherein, as Mr. Leslie, a competent judge on such a point, declares ‘expression is carried as far as possible.’”—Gilchrist’s ‘Life of Etty,’ vol. ii., p. 119.

Panel

33½ in. by 42 in.

Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1841

A. APPIANI.

- 46 PORTRAIT OF NAPOLEON I. IN CORONATION ROBES. On the 26th of May 1805, by request from the Senate of the Italian Republic, Napoleon was crowned King of Italy at Milan by the Archbishop of that city, but it was stipulated that the two crowns—of France and Italy—should remain united only on his head. Napoleon, therefore, appointed his stepson, Eugene Beauharnais, his viceroy of the kingdom of Italy.

Three-quarter length, standing and looking sternly to the right; the hair brushed forward on to the forehead. Napoleon wears a green uniform, richly embroidered with gold, and a green cloak lined with white silk, which is also embroidered; across his breast is a red ribbon bordered with green, and round his waist a white silk scarf, in which is a sword with hilt ornamented with the head of Medusa and an eagle. He wears the chain of the Order of the Golden Eagle, and several other Orders on his breast; his left hand is on a crown which rests on a cushion

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.

90 HON. MRS. SEYMOUR DAMER. Anne, daughter of the Hon. Seymour Conway, the distinguished General and Field-Marshal, and brother of the first Marquess of Hertford; married John, eldest son of Joseph Damer, Earl of Dorchester, of Milton Abbey; born 1748, died 1828

This lady was a distinguished and able amateur sculptor, and a frequent exhibitor at the Royal Academy from 1785 to 1818. Among other works of hers is the statue of herself in the hall of the British Museum, the heads on the bridge at Henley, and various busts. Horace Walpole, her cousin, left her Strawberry Hill, where she resided till 1810, with 2000*l.* a year for its maintenance. She is very often mentioned in Walpole's "Letters," as also in Leslie and Taylor's "Life of Sir Joshua Reynolds," and seems to have been a personal friend of the President. She was one of "the pretty fellows" who adopted, with the Duchess of Ancaster and Lady Melbourne, the male dominoes at a famous masquerade at the "Pantheon" in 1772

"A third female genius is Mrs. Damer, daughter of Gen. Conway, in a walk more difficult and far more uncommon than painting," — Walpole.

Three-quarter length, standing, in a white dress embroidered with gold, over which is a peach-coloured robe lined with pale blue; hands together; round the neck a black ribbon, from a long loop of which hangs a small locket; a long plait of hair falls over each shoulder. Landscape background, with a distant view of hills across a lake; evening effect

49½ in. by 39 in.

Painted in 1771

Engraved by J. R. Smith

Exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery (Reynolds Exhibition), 1884
